

“AFL Dishonoured”

MEDIA RELEASE: June 25th, 2015

Australia's biggest sporting organization the "Australian Football League" AFL needs to lift its game on disability support and actions

When last year nearly every state premier wrote to the AFL asking for a Disability Inclusion Round and the AFL rejected such an option without any discussions, meetings and exploration of the need for support the AFL showed itself to be aloof, out of touch or simply too narcissistic for its own good.

Around the country at local level many good things are happening for people with disability in accessing major sport and community events
They are however small, disjointed and in desperate need of big brother like support

The link below reflects an article from the Adelaide Advertiser today (page 24) highlighting how far the AFL is behind major sports organisations across the world in promoting the talent and the community recognition and acceptance people with disability need.
